Councilmember Curran, duly seconded, made a motion to journalize the invocation. It was so ordered.

Let us pray for the city we live in, for all our fellow citizens that it may become for all of us a truly human community, a city of peace.

Let us pray for safety in our city that no one's life should be endangered by another's carelessness and that our children may not meet with accidents.

Let us pray for peace and tranquillity, for all who are harassed, for a sound and healthy atmosphere and an open, human climate among all people of all races, creeds and ethnic backgrounds.

Let us pray for all who have not yet got a home of their own, for all who are badly housed and for all who work to see the reality of affordable housing for everyone.

Journal of the City Council

Let us pray for all who suffer as immigrants that they may be received with hospitality.

Let us pray for those who live in wealth and luxury that they may keep their hearts and homes open to those who are in need.

Let us pray for ourselves, elected and called to serve, that we may find happiness in our city, that we do not destroy each other by spreading hatred and division, but, that we may be, with each other and as in one body, the city of God on earth.

O God give your glory and your promised future to Ken Harris. We cannot believe that his life has been spent in vain and that all that he meant to other people is lost now that he is no longer with us.

We pray that nothing of his life will be lost but that it will be of benefit to the world; and that all that he held sacred may be respected by those who follow him and that everything in which he was great may continue to mean much to us.

We ask You that he may go on living in his family and in all the members of this community, in their hearts and minds, their courage and their conscience.

Ken Harris, may you know God's peace now and forever.

A COUNCIL RESOLUTION CONCERNING

In Support of Federal Legislation – FIT Kids Act

FOR the purpose of expressing support for the Fitness Integrated with Teaching (FIT) Kids Act that amends the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (ESEA), to measure not only student academic progress but also student progress toward a national goal of 150 minutes weekly of physical education in elementary school and 225 minutes weekly of physical education in middle and high schools.

Recitals

Childhood obesity has reached epidemic proportions in the U.S. The Department of Health and Human Services projects that 20% of children and youth in the U.S. will be obese by 2010. Overweight adolescents have a 70% chance of becoming overweight or obese adults, increasing their risk for developing heart disease, stroke, several types of cancer, Type 2 diabetes, and osteoarthritis.

As reported by the Baltimore City Council Task Force on Childhood Obesity, obesity brings with it a host of co-morbidities that are expensive in human terms and medical costs. 61% of overweight young people have at least 1 additional risk factor for heart disease, such as high blood pressure or high cholesterol. Children who are overweight are at a greater risk for orthopedic problems, sleep apnea, and psychological problems such as stigmatization and low self-esteem.

Evidence suggests that healthy, active children learn more effectively and achieve more academically. Several large-scale studies have found improvements in students' academic performance with increased time spent in physical education. Similarly, recent research has found a strong correlation between academic performance and aerobic fitness. Evidence further suggests that physical activity has a positive impact on cognitive ability and preventing tobacco use, insomnia, depression, and anxiety.

The FIT Kids Act amends ESEA to require annual state and local education agency report cards to include specified information on school health and physical education programs, encouraging life-long healthy habits for children. The Act amends the No Child Left Behind Act to:

- Hold schools accountable for working towards national standards for physical education – 150 minutes per week for elementary school, and 225 minutes per week for middle and high school students;
- Require all schools, districts, and states to report on the quantity and quality of physical education they provide;
- Ensure that children get the information and support they need from schools and parents throughout their education to help them live a healthy lifestyle;
- Support professional development for physical education teachers, health teachers, and principals to help promote children's healthy lifestyles and physical activity; and
- Fund research and a pilot program to support effective ways to combat childhood obesity and improve healthy living and physical activity for all children.

The FIT Kids Act furthers the goal of the Baltimore City Council to reverse this country's trend toward childhood obesity. The Council joins the bill's supporters in seeking passage of the Act as a means of making a real difference in the fight against this epidemic without burdening schools, districts, and states.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF BALTIMORE, That this Body supports the Fitness Integrated with Teaching (FIT) Kids Act that amends the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (ESEA), to measure not only student academic progress but also student progress toward a national goal of 150 minutes weekly of physical education in elementary school and 225 minutes weekly of physical education in middle and high schools.
