City Council President Stephanie Rawlings-Blake To Host Financial Literacy Fair at City Hall

Baltimore, MD (April 13, 2007) – In recognition of April as National Financial Literacy Month, City Council President Stephanie Rawlings-Blake will host Financial Literacy Day on Monday, April 16, 2007, for City employees. In the Curran Room, on the fourth floor of City Hall, from 11:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m., City employees can benefit from the resources and educational information available from several reputable local financial security organizations.

Employees will be treated to information regarding sound financial practices, and advice about the unscrupulous plans to avoid.

“Everyone can benefit from the advice and information offered by the participants of Financial Literacy Day,” noted President Stephanie Rawlings-Blake. “I invite all City employees to get involved, and take advantage of the many programs to save and invest for the future.”

Participating organizations include the Baltimore Office of the Federal Reserve Bank, the Municipal Employees Credit Union of Baltimore, the Baltimore Homeownership Preservation Coalition, the Home Ownership Office of Baltimore Housing, Belair-Edison Neighborhoods, Inc., Citistreet, the St. Ambrose Housing Aid Center, CASH, Southeast Community Development Corporation, and NeighborWorks America. Entry to City Hall requires a form of photo identification. All City employees are welcome to Financial Literacy Day.
